With Palm all but abandoning its 'classic' devices developed prior to the new Palm Pre, which does not use the same legacy Palm OS nor its HotSync or Palm Desktop software, the value of maintaining HotSync support in Mac OS X has dropped dramatically, leaving Apple to cut the support from the version that ships with Mac OS X Snow Leopard entirely.. This software was then incorporated as part of iSync 2.0, released as part of Mac OS X Tiger nearly half a decade ago.. In concert with launching its Macs as the 'digital hub' and selling the iPod, Apple developed iSync for Mac OS X, which enabled devices from any manufacturer to sync their data with a common store shared by desktop apps including iCal and Address Book.
